HONOR FOR GOETHE DOESN'T ROB DEWE

German-Americans Celebrate the Great Poet's Birth.

THEIR PART IN WAR.

Orator Tells of the Services Rendered by Them at Manila.

gathered in Prospect Park, Brooklyn, yes

The speech of the day was made be George Von Skal, representing Oswald O tendorfer, editor of the Staats Zellung. Mr. Von Skal sald:

"We have come together to-day as Amerlean citizens of German parentage, proudof our adopted country, proud of everythin; we have done for the Union, but proud als art and Gemean thought.

We commemorate the anniversary of the day when the first German emigrants sfoot in this country, and also do we honor a great German, the greatest German poet the anniversary of our forefathers' landing Goethe was German throughout In his feelings and in his thoughts, in his poems and in his acts he was a son of the people we claim as our own. Whatever he has created he has taken out of the soul of the German nation. We point with pride to him as a German, and we proclaim to the whole world: He was a German! He was one of our people! The statement I not arrogance; it is warranted self-consciousness, the like our Goethe possessed and the like he demanded of the German nation, and whose want he often deplored. "We need not fear of being negligent in out duty to the United States by celebrating the German day. We commemorate this day, not because we wish to emphasize that we are not Americans with heart and soul, but because we desire to show that we are second to no other citizen whatever in this great union in our love for the adopted land and our patriotism for it.

"We do not commemorate this day to place Germany above America, but to thank our old fatherland from the depths of our hearts for the immensely valuable gifts where here endowed with to enrich our new atherland. The history of this country shows how we have discharged our duties to the new home.

"To speak about the patriotism of German discount of the search of the patriotism of German derivation of the country shows how we have discharged our duties to the new home. In his feelings and in his thoughts, in his trades working in the navy yards. As matters stand now there are effect, second and third classes in each trade, and the pay is graded accordingly. When a man comes to work he is put into the lowest class. It is said to be practically impossible to get into the first chass without the favoritism of the foreman.

What the Central Federated Union desires is that the mayal authorities shall pay a minimum rate of wages equal to that paid by reputable private firms for the same kind off work, and if a man is worth more that he may have a chance of getting it. 128
